About the Author

Our first book -- 'Trojan Horse: Death of a Dark Nation' -- was published in 2009 under the pseudonym -- Anon.

In 2011, our pen name was changed to Umoja (the Swahili word for Unity) for our second book, 'Black Love Is A Revolutionary Act.'

Why The Authors Use A Pen Name

There is nothing original about the ideas presented here. Wiser minds have come before and will certainly come long after this book was written. The authors are not falsely modest; we are acknowledging we did not invent the wheel.

The authors are not seeking fame. This is not an attempt to be mysterious or provoke curiosity. This is not a gimmick or a perverse, reverse publicity ploy. In today's media-obsessed world, there is too much focus on "show" and not enough on "substance." The authors choose not to participate.

The authors reserve the right NOT to be a distraction to the message. We are the least important part of this book. You, the reader, are more important. Even more important, is what you do with this information.

Every word in this book was designed to inform, provoke discussion, decrease confusion, reduce hostility, minimize conflict, and to promote the kinds of constructive actions that are necessary to replace the system of Racism/White Supremacy with a system of universal justice for all the people on the planet.

You may not agree with everything or anything in this book. We have presented our truths to the best of our ability. If this book inspires you to seek your own truths, our book has been a success.
