Detective Inspector Napoleon Bonaparte: His Life and Times By Michael Duke

Bony was a 'blacktracker' who became a police inspector and worked throughout mainland Australia. Ranging across five of Australia's States, Dr Duke pursued Bony's trail through desert and coast. He has tracked through the bush, its wonderful scenery and characters. He has climbed mountains and swum in inland seas. For the first time, the reader can learn of the real Bony and his antecedents. For the first time, the Aboriginal background to so many of Bony's cases is revealed. This biography displays the real spirit of Australia.

Editorial Review

About the Author

Dr Michael Duke has worked for over four decades in Australia and two decades with the Australian Aboriginal people. He is a consulting psychiatrist and has also published widely on Sherlock Holmes. This combined set of experiences led him to consider that the unique character created by expatriate English author, Arthur Upfield, Detective Inspector Napoleon Bonaparte, demanded his first biography.
